Biography

Seth was called into missions at a young age but struggled at first to know how God could use a country boy who worked with his hands on the mission field. As he got older, he recognized that God could use his skills—and anyone’s skills—for His kingdom. Veronica grew up as a missionary kid with WGM and was born and raised in Bolivia. You could say missions is in her blood.

We met, fell in love, got married, and knew that our lives would be dedicated to serving the Lord on the mission field for as long as He wanted. While still in college, we applied to WGM, raised funds, and finished our term as missionary disciples (two years) in PNG. We know this is where God wants us, and we now serve as career missionaries.

We live in the Southern Highlands on the Montanda Station. Montanda is about a four- to six-hour drive from Mt. Hagen (where we lived before) over rough roads into the bush. The missionary house on the station has been empty for 30 years and needs a lot of repairs, including installing gutters, water tanks, and a solar system so we can have running water and electricity.

We are excited about our ministries and can’t wait to see how God will continue to use us to further His kingdom in PNG.
